IN WAKE OF INVASION

Nobody can beat the Dutch when it comes to courage and spirit. Their dead after the flood numbered 1,500. More than 300,000 lowland dwellers were left without homes. Altogether a million are in some degree of distress out of a total population of 10,000,000. That's as if 15,000,000 Americans had suddenly been struck by disaster.

One-fourth of Holland's arable land is reported badly pickled in brine. This will do greater and more lasting damage, proportionately, than did the great drought of the Western United States 20 years ago.

Bales of clothing gathered in this country have swamped air and water lines across the ocean. The prime need now is money—which involves no transportation problem. Money is needed for the relief of refugees, and credit to restore the dikes and clean up the mess.

The Netherlands no longer depends on a colonial empire as a source of riches. Will friends rally around Holland now? They would do so if an aggressor nation were storming over the eastern border. This time it is the natural phenomenon of an aggressor ocean. An ocean on the rampage can be as destructive as war.

GROWTH OF CITIES

The world has at least 900 cities of a population of 100,000 or more. That number may actually be exceeded, though there are no figures on the Soviet Union later than 1939, and those on Chinese cities are markedly out of date. But on this basis the United States, with only one-fifteenth of the estimated world population of 2,400,000,000, has approximately one-tenth of the cities of 100,000 or more, the 1950 census reporting exactly 100 of them.

Most of these American cities showed substantial gains. Eight states had five or more cities in the 100,000 class. California and Ohio had eight each, Massachusetts and Texas had seven. Ten of the 48 states had no cities of that size, while 13 had only one each.

New York is uncontestedly the world's greatest city. The five boroughs of New York have a combined population of 7,891,757, while that of London "city proper" is 3,348,346. To New York's metropolitan area are attributed 12,296,117 inhabitants, compared to London's metropolitan area of 8,346,137.

At a time when the U. S. is vastly surpassing every other nation in production, helping to bolster Western Europe against possible Russian attack and bearing the brunt of the war in Korea, Americans may rejoice that the population of this country is on the increase and its industries, aside from those largely devoted to defense, are prospering.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

by Fulton Lewis, Jr.
(Copyright, 1952,
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17. Senator Allen J. Ellender may be getting a little excited about the $2,000,000 that various Congressional Committees are seeking for investigations this year.

The amount is small in comparison to the job that needs to be done and the fact that previous administrations have spent nearly $300,000,000,000 of our money without any thoroughgoing accounting to date.

Ellender does have a point, however, when he warns his GOP colleagues that they probably will wind up in a tug of war to see who is going to investigate what. Some of the probes will require hard, plodding and unsensational work, while others, such as those into corruption and Communism, make the headlines and are thus politically desirable, as well as being of service to the nation's security.

For instance, at the moment the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is planning to establish an Internal Security Subcommittee; the Senate Rules Committee may set up another; the Senate's Permanent Investigating Committee, directed by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin, already has internal security investigations underway. Another similar subcommittee already in existence is an offshoot of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

In each instance, sponsors of this type of inquiry have a point in arguing their cases before the Senate Rules Committee. Senator Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, wants an Internal Security Subcommittee to explore the relationship between domestic betrayal and United States Foreign Policy. This is a fertile field, as the so-called McCarran Internal Security Subcommittee disclosed in its recent and exhaustive study of the Institute of Pacific Relations. The same type of investigation is necessary into the Roosevelt-Truman Foreign Policy failures in Europe. Ellender charged that professional sleuths and jobholders are hoodwinking some Senators in an effort to hold onto their jobs or create new ones. He did not get specific, so perhaps it would not be amiss to remind him of one or two that fit his designation. They functioned during the 81st and 82nd Congresses, which his party controlled. Specifically, there was the notorious Tydings whitewash subcommittee; the Gillette subcommittee that investigated the Maryland election of 1950; and the recent probe of Senator McCarthy as a result of demands by the since-defeated Senator William Benton of Connecticut.

There never was a wider collection of Congressional boozers than those employed on some of these committees. The asininity of the Tydings investigation alone will lone remain a Congressional hallmark of political chicanery.

Republicans are bound, however, to sit down and divide the investigative work among those competent to handle it. A point Ellender overlooks, but would be justified in mentioning, is that the GOP operation in the new Senate remains to this day a headless creature with the potential of a blockbuster. Nobody knows for sure who is going to run what, and nobody seems to want to step up and make the decision.

Technically the job belongs to Senator William Knowland of California, majority policy boss. There is no point in having a half dozen Internal Security Subcommittees, or any similar collection of subcommittee staffs. There are a number of strong personalities in the Senate who think otherwise—such as Jenner, McCarthy and Wiley—but somebody has to crack the whip. That is Knowland's job, although he may be waiting for word from Senator Robert A. Taft, who probably will step in and settle the fracas if Knowland fails to act.

The confusion could be settled in one other way. McCarthy has a going concern already probing the phonies in the State Department who greased disloyal employees into the United Nations—and if he makes his findings public the dispute would resolve itself. There is nothing like a few days of public hearings in the Senate to help settle jurisdictional disputes. If it isn't McCarthy it will be another subcommittee chairman, who steps out in front. The important thing is to get the show on the road. Ellender is willing to spend money for investigations but not on debates over who is to conduct them. So am I.

It Calls The Police

THE NEWEST WEAPON in the war to combat crime in the subway is this "Call-a-Cop" alarm that is shown being installed at sidewalk level above the entrance to a New York subway. It consists of a flashing light and a clanging bell that, in case of an emergency, are set in operation by pressure on a treadle in the change booth underground. The device is said to be vandal-proof. (International)

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

A Place To Start

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17. The part of the Eisenhower state of the Union message which caused almost unanimous approval was that dealing with the debt, the deficit and taxes. On these subjects, it is overwhelmingly agreed, the new President was clear and concrete. Avoiding the demagogic approach, he emphatically asserted that, desirable as it is, tax reduction must wait until control of the budget has been regained and the looming deficit wiped out by eliminating waste.

That is neither a new nor an original idea and extremely few members of Congress or anyone else will dispute its soundness. However, considering the frequency with which it was voiced by Mr. Eisenhower's predecessors, two questions seem pertinent: First, how deeply does he mean it? Second, where do we start? As to the first, there is every reason to believe the Eisenhower sincerity is more to be relied upon than that of either the late Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Truman.

For one thing his personal pledge—in which he included the head of every executive department—has been made in a more impressive and determined way. For another, he has no spending program, such as the Messrs. Roosevelt and Truman had, to nullify all efforts at economy. For still another, as a result of twenty years' unrestricted expenditures, the Federal fiscal structure is more insecure and alarming than at any other time in our history. And finally, immediately following his speech, Mr. Eisenhower issued rather convincing orders "freezing" Federal jobs and barring "unnecessary" agency programs.

As to the second question—where do we start? What seems to be a more than usually adequate answer has just been made by Senator Olin Johnston, of South Carolina, recently returned from an extended personal investigation in Europe, Africa and the Near East. In a report to the Senate last week Senator Johnston presented some startling facts. There are, he declared, at least 100,000 superfluous employees on the Government payroll in foreign countries. Billions of dollars, he said, are wasted. For example, in Paris alone there are 49 separate American agencies each independent of the others. Manning these agencies are to be found three different Americans with the rank of Ambassador, three with the rank of Minister and numerous administrators, directors and heads of missions. Commenting on the state of affairs, Senator Johnston reported that there was "incredible duplication of effort, overlapping authority, over-staffing, waste and fraud and inefficiency consequent to such conditions."

Further, the Senator said, the expensive scale on which these American agents live abroad does not contribute to American security or prestige. Rather, it breeds contempt, suspicion and disgust. This is strong language from a usually mild Senator and the indictment is too devastating to be ignored or swept aside. Nor is there any flavor of partisan politics in it. In the first place, Senator Johnston is a Democrat and the setup he is criticizing was created by a Democratic Administration of which he was a part. In the second place, Senator Johnston's report to the Senate is exactly in line with information brought back by other investigators and travelers of both parties. In addition, the Johnston report is supported by Mr. H. W. Brawley, minority clerk of the Senate Civil Service Committee, who traveled over the same ground. According to Mr. Brawley, the United States has more than 250,000 employees abroad and a pay roll exceeding $1,125,800,000 a year.

In the light of the revealed facts, it seems impossible to deny that our policy of building up our allies abroad, however sound in conception, is being carried out with great, unnecessary waste and inefficiency. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and Mutual Security Administrator Harold Stassen are about to return to Washington after a tour of the ten European countries upon which Senator Johnston, Mr. Brawley and others have reported. Undoubtedly these conditions will have been brought to their attention. As leading members of the Eisenhower Administration and the men now responsible for the aid program abroad, if they confirm, as seems inevitable, the Johnston report, something will have to be done about it—and quickly. It seems a situation in which inaction upon the part of the Administration would reflect upon the sincerity of the Eisenhower declaration that waste must be eliminated and the budget brought under control.

NAACP Holds Panel Discussion at Newtown

At a recent membership meeting of The Bucks County Branch of The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People held at Saint Marks A.M.E. Church in Newtown, the housing committee of The Human Relations Council of Bucks County presented a panel discussion on the topic "Housing Problems of Bucks County". The panel stressed the need to develop patterns of equality and good will in housing for all, according to democratic principles.

Harrison H. Fisher, Bristol industrial chemist, newly elected president of the Bucks County Branch of the NAACP thanked the panel in behalf of his group for their unique presentation. The panel participants were Mrs. Madeline McGruder, wife of a physician; Mrs. Mary Ruth Hyde, wife of a minister, and Paul Blachard, Jr., Director of the Educational Committee of the Human Relations Council of Bucks County, who is a member of the faculty of the George School of Newtown.

Jacques E. Wilmore of the American Friends Service Committee of Philadelphia gave a report on employment policies of Bucks County industrial firms as it affects minority groups. Mr. Wilmore expressed appreciation and praise for the cooperative spirit shown by Bucks County firms in the employment on the basis of merit policy.

If the Child Cries at Night

By GARY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

SUPPOSE your baby, 17 months old, consumed more milk by night than by day and you had always given him a bottle as often as he awoke and cried for it, many times a night. If you did not wish to continue in this way, what would you do?

A mother with this problem writes:

"Dear Dr. Myers: My son, who doesn't drink much milk by day, drinks a quart or more each night. He will not go to sleep without a bottle. Often it is refilled two or three times before he finally goes to sleep. This bothers me not half as much as the fact that when he is put to bed, usually around 9, he either plays for an hour or more, or if he does go to sleep within half an hour, will waken after sleeping a minimum of 20 minutes or a maximum of four hours. Either he stays up for another hour or two or starts another bottle of milk and goes back to sleep, only to waken once or several times before morning.

"When we've tried putting him to bed at 8 he slept till about 10, and stayed awake till about 12. He has a nap in the afternoon.

"I suppose I should deny him the milk at night, but I've always given it to him when he wanted it. This has gone on since birth. Frankly, I'm worn out, having had exactly eight hours of uninterrupted slumber only once in all this time.

"We lived with my grandmother his first year and she saw that we didn't let him cry. Soon a mere whimper from the baby brought me bounding out of bed to quiet him by changing his diaper and refilling his bottle. Now that we have our own flat the situation repeats itself. The walls being paper-thin, I can't let him cry at night. What on earth should I do?"

Tell Neighbors the Problem

Either you must go on indefinitely, as at present, or let this youngster cry it out. But the neighbors? Go tell them your problem. They may be quick to see it would be better to have you settle this matter during a few nights, than to be disturbed by some night crying by the child for months or years. Even if they don't, I'm sure you would be morally justified to settle it now.

But it's going to be costly for you and that child. Don't start until you are steeled to see the problem through. The youngster may cry for four or five hours the first night before he wears himself out and an hour or two the next, reaching practically zero after a week or less. Give him just warm water in the bottle when he wakens in the night. Set an earlier regular bedtime and stick to it.

If your pediatrician advises you differently, you should, of course, follow his advice. If he has a plan that works, please let me know about it, unless he has it patented!

Alseph H. Corwin, head of the department of chemistry at Johns Hopkins University, speaking before the American Chemical Society, quoted a National Bureau of Standards report that "we have no reason whatever to believe that chlorophyll ever has anything to do with deodorization."

Colossians 3:3: "For ye died, and your life is hid with Christ in God."

Only one-eighth of the mass bulk of icebergs is visible; all the rest is under water. This is what makes them so formidable to navigators, this is what makes their strength. In the same way the life of a Christian should in large part be hidden; it is from what one does not see that its force is drawn.

The stability of a house cannot be gauged from its outward appearance; it is secured by its invisible foundations. When a storm comes some humble dwelling may stand while palaces crumble. The same way with every spiritual edifice: it is not a question of shining and dazzling people, but of being firmly founded, of having a "life hid with Christ in God."

This hidden life is made up of what you bring each day to God: mostly your tears and your troubles, the defeats and the ruins of your outer structures. These are by no means first-rate materials and the hours that you spend alone with God may be from your misery. What counts is that you seek His presence, far from prying eyes. While you groan He builds patiently in you, secretly, the indispensable foundations.

Outwardly you may remain very much like the person you were before, or like those around you. You will appear to be a peaceful, honest person, with nothing to distinguish you from the crowd. It will need the blows of the storm, the clash against the obstacle, to reveal to others and to yourself your mysterious firmness—that hidden life which others may not have suspected.

Present "Case" for Rowing To Lower Bucks School

LOWER MAKEFIELD TWP., Feb. 17—Eight lower Bucks county high schools were represented at the meeting of Penna. Interscholastic Athletic Ass'n, held last evening in Pennsylvania high school, Stanley Dick, of Delhaas high school, Bristol twp., presided at the session.

Guests at the meeting were "Jack" Kelly, Jr., Philadelphia, Olympic rower, and John S. Trinsley, Hultmeville. The two presented the "case" for rowing to the schools, and showed films of the 1948 and 1952 Olympic rowing events. Also included were "shots" of schoolboy rowing throughout the United States, and some regattas in other countries.

Kelly spoke in reference to rowing, informing that most of the "top-notch" rowers of the country are products of schoolboy rowing programs.

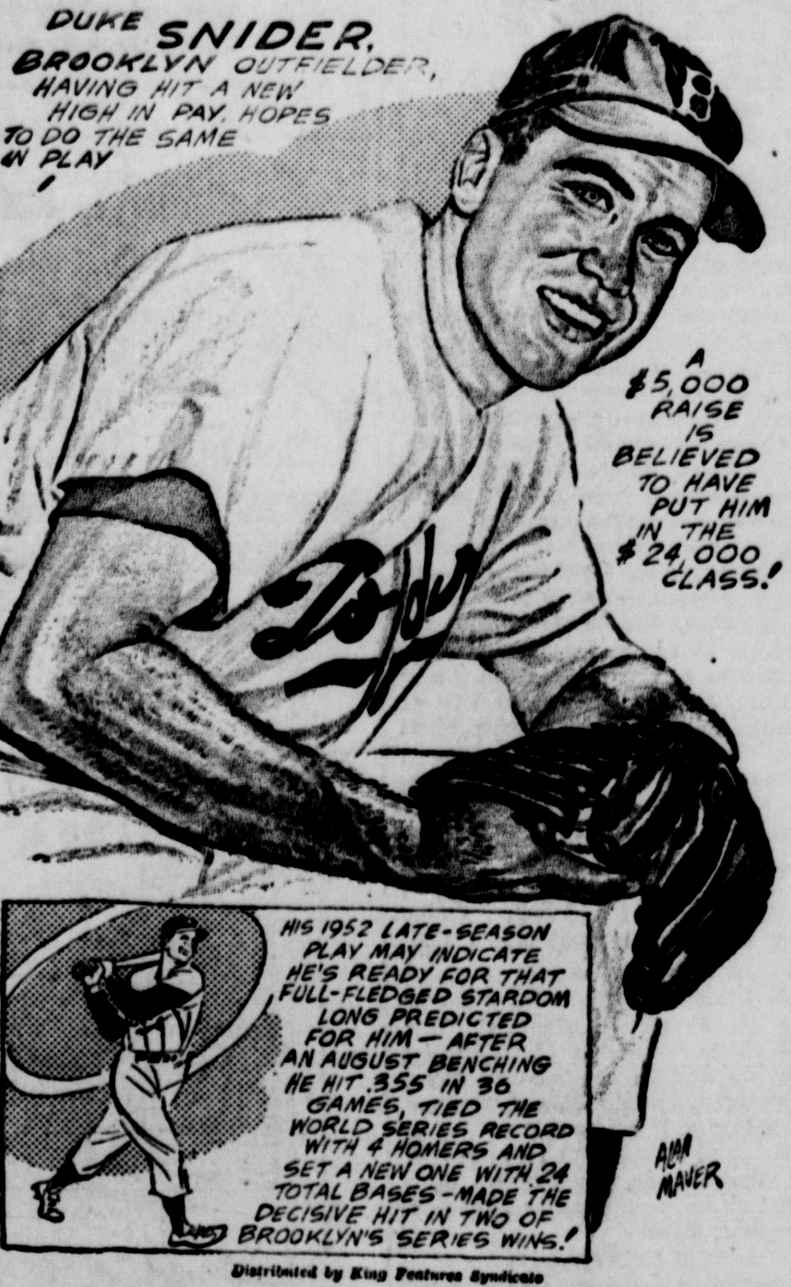

The Bucks County Rowing Association, through Kelly and Trinsley, has borrowed and bought eight shells for use of the schools. The two informed P. I. A. officials that they wish the schools to decide on the issue, the project presented having three phases: 1. The schools, to provide transportation for crew candidates from the schools to the Delaware River at Bristol; 2. schools to provide a teacher-coach, the rowing association to hold clinics and teach coaches which the schools appoint; 3. the schools to provide whatever they can toward expense of renting equipment, thus helping reimburse the rowing association.

Trinsley plans to send letters to the schools, outlining the plan, the schools to make decisions and so inform the association by next Monday.

Judges Hear Several

Bristol twp., arrested the defendant who was committed to jail Dec. 21, 1950, the first time.

He was given a psychiatric examination at Norristown State Hospital where the psychiatrist described him as normal but antisocial.

Judge Edwin H. Satterthwaite, in the Court of Common Pleas, authorized a compromise settlement at a hearing in which a Croydon high school girl and her parents, John R. and Eleanor Kidd, were the principals.

The defendants, none of whom appeared at the hearing, are Maurice O. Whitlock, who owned the car, and Lloyd A. Whitlock, who drove the car in which the minor-plaintiff, Diana V. Kidd, was riding Nov. 23, 1951, when she was injured.

The minor-plaintiff testified she and the defendant, Lloyd A. Whitlock, were returning from a drive-in movie theatre when the car left the highway and the "next thing she knew she was lying on the road."

There was no other car involved but the defendant's car left the road and collided with a pole.

Judge Satterthwaite ruled that the parents will receive $170 because of the expenses involved in connection with their daughter's injuries. The balance, representing $230, will be placed in a trust fund for the benefit of the minor-plaintiff, Diana, and kept for her until she is of age.

Expenditures involved a $72 Nazareth Hospital bill; $40, miscellaneous, and various doctors' bills totaling $3; $40, and $15.

Judge Satterthwaite signed a decree by which Leonard Joseph Lasprella, 826 Emilie ave., Croydon, will now be known as Leonard Joseph Dugan. He was born May 11, 1927, in Bristol, and his maternal grandmother's name is Dugan and he testified he was more frequently known as "Lennie Dugan" than by Lasprella. He served in the armed forces under the name of Lasprella.

Judge Edward G. Blester in Quarter Sessions, committed a Perkase father, William L. Warden, 115 South 4th st., to the County Prison for contempt of a court support order which is more than $700 in arrearages.

The wife, Jeannette, and four minor children, are supposed to receive $25 a week. Up to Nov. 18, 1952, the arrearages were $700.

Frank N. Holgate, Jr., Dolington, Newtown, RD 1, was purged of his contempt of a support order and sent to Keswick Colony of Mercy, Keswick, N. J., for treatment. The defendant-husband has a wife, Hilda, and three children.

William Cummons, a foreman at the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co., Emilie road, Bristol, RD 1, was directed by Judge Edwin H. Satterthwaite to pay $17.50 a week for the support of his wife.

Caroline Cummons, 427 Sycamore st., Croydon. The defendant testified he is now paying $20 for the support of three children by a former marriage.

Thomas Scott, 126 Hillcrest ave., Croydon, was given two months to catch up in his arrearages and the prosecutrix is his wife, Alice. They have a small daughter who lives with her mother in Parkland.

William E. Booz, 699 Garden st., Bristol, was allowed three months to make up arrearages. The wife, Anna Booz Flaherty, is the prosecutrix, and there is a minor son.

Three judges, President Judge Hiram H. Keller and Judges Edward G. Blester and Edwin H. Satterthwaite, heard domestic relations court cases.

Firemen Take Exception

County as he found it on his arrival in Bucks County was living back in the early 1900's.

"Upon confirmation of the report of this occurrence from other sources," Russell said, "a motion was made by former Chief of Edgely Fire Co. Fred K. Hibbs, seconded by Chief Charles Steiner of Falls township, that a committee be set up to contact Mr. Levitt and have him retract his statement made Feb. 16, 1953, with respect to fire fighting protection in Bucks County, to the television audience or prove his statements."

"If no satisfaction is secured from Mr. Levitt the committee is instructed to secure legal advice on the matter," Russell added.

Robert O'Neal, president, appointed the following members of the committee to contact Levitt: Fred Hibbs, former chief of Edgely Fire Co.; Chief Archie Kaufman, Langhorne; Chief Paul McBride, Feasterville; Chief C. A. Russell, Trevesville; Bucks County Fire Marshal Robert Graham, Chalfont.

Last night's meeting, held at the Lingochock Fire Co., was presided over by Robert O'Neal, president. The group was welcomed by Chief Landis of the Lingochock Fire Co.

Following the regular order of business representatives of manufacturers of fire fighting equipment and detection services spoke to the group and demonstrated equipment.

The committee appointed for the Bucks County Fire School reported on the selection of three tentative sites. The site will be picked at the next meeting, Russell reported.

President Robert O'Neal spoke of the lack of cooperation by local and state authorities with the fire companies. He spoke of the lack of laws beneficial to firemen in Pennsylvania and said that other states had "bent over backward" to help volunteer fire companies and when local governments wanted something of the people the first places they contacted were the fire companies and the firemen.

Chief Zlayek of Yardley reported

ed on a house fire and a fire in the municipal building that caused an estimated $27,000 damage. Chief Tomlinson of Trevesville reported a fire at Linconia in which two children burned to death; Chief Rush of Plumsteadville reported on a fire in a house at Plumsteadville; Chief Doster of Edgely reported on two fires in Bristol Terrace 2.

Plan Re-Scheduling

and under the plan proposed would eliminate much of the lunch time problem. Shorter afternoon sessions under the plan would eliminate the present long interval between lunch and dinner for the afternoon students, he declared.

At the last meeting of the school board, Vansant said, a recommendation was received from school architects that corrections for drainage should be made to the new high school field because of the clay structure of the site soil. Three alternate methods were proposed to cope with this drainage problem: sub-plow, considered a contingent process; drill and blast, to break the strata of clay, has a permanent effect; lay drainage tile, a common method of a permanent nature, he explained.

The second well has been drilled at the school site, he continued. The last depth of this well was 285 feet and it was delivering 12-15 gallons per minute, added Vansant.

The school board permitted the use of two classrooms for six weeks courses this summer to be conducted by Morton Hotel, reading consultant, Marlon VanHorn, and Roland Landis, of the athletic department, were authorized to attend the Football Clinic to be held in Atlantic City. Mrs. Dorothy Call, of Torresdale Manor, was elected as an additional school secretary. Three adding machines were purchased for the commercial department of the high school, Vansant concluded.
